

Magic-Illusions

BALLOONS THROUGH HEAD BOX

An assistant from the audience is asked to join you during your performance. You ask them to put their head in a wooden cabinet that measures 15" by 15" by 12". Several colorful balloon "swords" are propelled thru the cabinet from every imaginable angle.

If the audience thinks this is baffling wait until you open the cabinet. When the front door is opened and wow - the head has vanished! Only the balloon swords are visible through the cabinet. You now close the door, remove the balloon swords and the persons head is restored. This is a great sword box without the violence of swords. Great for kid's parties as any assistant can be used.

Chair Suspension

This improved version can be performed completely surrounded. The audience sees two chairs with a board laying across the backs. Someone from the audience is invited to lay on the board. They are covered with a cloth and the chair supporting their feet is removed leaving them and the board suspended in air. The board is now removed and they still remain suspended! Performer can walk completely away while the person remains suspended. Anyone up to 125 pounds can be used. Packs flat and weighs only 33 pounds.

Dagger Chest

Dagger Chest - Folding

Performer displays a square wooden chest with front and back openings, which the audience can see completely through. The chest is put around a spectator's head, and panels used to close the back and front, effectively trapping the head in the chest. Several daggers are now pushed through slots on the sides of the chest. Apparently they penetrate right through the head! The front panel is now lifted away. The inside of the chest is seen to be crisscrossed with daggers. There seems to be no room to conceal anything between the dagger blades. And the spectator's head has completely vanished. The front panel is now reinserted, and the daggers removed. Panels are then lifted away to reveal the spectator's head completely unharmed. The chest is pulled off the head, and the blind fold removed. This is one of the most popular illusions of all times. Our folding model collapses to a small compact size that can be carried in a briefcase. It can be erected in less than two minutes into a rigid form, which does not fall to pieces under normal handling. And you can dismantle it in a jiffy. Another special feature of our Dagger Chest is that you can use it with any spectator from the audience. The assistant has absolutely no part to play in the working. The spring hinged pieces open automatically when the daggers are inserted, and closed silently when the daggers are removed. By using a spectator from the audience (blindfolded so that they do not see the internal working), you greatly enhance the effect.

GREAT EFFECT AT A GREAT PRICE!

Dragon Enchanted Trunk

Tip over trunks have been a feature of nearly every Illusion show for the past 100 years, probably more. This is no surprise, since it is a clever principle that has helped delight audiences of every generation. We think the illusion is improved by lifting the trunk off the floor, or the typical low base. We think it makes the production all the more impossible that anything could be hidden. With that in mind, we offer the Dragon's Enchanted Trunk. Angelo Carbone designed the trunk to be a good size without being too large. Measuring approximately 20 x 18 x 21.5 (51 x 46 x 55 centimeters) and resting on a wheeled stand that is roughly 24.5 x 26 x 22.5 (62 x 66 x 57 centimeters) it can produce an impressive load, an animal or even an assistant. Yet, when it is shown, it can clearly be seen to be a completely empty trunk. Built strong enough for the toughest traveling show, it is colorful and attractive and, of course, consistent with the Asian motif of the entire line. It's tastefully painted with Chinese red and decorated with imitation gold leaf paintings of traditional Chinese Dragons. The design is modern but the look is classic Chinese. If you need a tip over trunk for your show, and who doesn't these days, the Dragon's Enchanted Trunk is a great choice.

TEMPLE OF BENARES AND DOLL HOUSE COMBO ILLUSION

This is a combination outfit of two different illusions, for the price of one. Both illusions are easy to perform, and can be presented with less than an hour's practice with a lady assistant. This will be ample to perform these flawlessly, although some more effort would be involved for the dramatics and presentation of large stage illusions.

The Doll's House is a miniature "house" as the name implies. Performer opens it to display it is filled with stuffed toys, or a large doll. The toys or doll are removed, the door closed, and a "live doll" (the performer's assistant) appears, crashing through the roof of the miniature house.

The Temple of Benares is a variation of the Dagger Chest, using a person instead of just the head of one.

Performer displays a small "temple". Lady assistant (high priestess or devotee) enters the temple, apparently filling it up completely.

Now a dozen swords are pushed into the temple at all angles. Then the performer opens the doors of the temple, and the audience can see the swords going through at all angles, and filling it up completely. The lady has vanished. Temple is wheeled and shown all around. Doors are closed, swords removed, and lady emerges from temple completely unharmed.

The two illusions are sufficiently different in effect and appearance, so both can be used in the same show. We have designed them in a compact folding model, with parts that can be changed in less than a minute.

The props we supply comprise of the following

The special "base" which is common to both illusions.

Four legs with casters that plug into the base in an instant, allowing you to roll the illusion on stage, or all around during performance.

The Doll's House shell (three parts that fit together in less than a minute). The shell slips over the base in an instant.

The Temple shell, similar to the Doll's House shell, with different shape, color scheme etc., so it looks like a completely different prop.

12 Metal Swords.

2 Display Stands for the Swords, each in four parts that assemble instantly to form the upright stand, and dismantle for packing and transportation.

Compact & Portable : All the props occupy a space of 36" length, 30" width, and 21" height when folded. When assembled they make a large display on any stage. The illusion is supplied in sturdy carrying cartons, which you can load in a small van, or even the booth of a large car. For the performer looking for large stage effects at a very affordable price, this is excellent value for your money.
